The conclusion of the Seminar, after having underscored the positivity of the methods and style experienced, summarizes above all the main achievements that emerged during the course of the works, organizing them into three points: the “place” of the university and the “subject” that gives it form; its specific “task” to articulate the inspiration of wisdom with the autonomous and convergent practicability of the various disciplines; the “way” of the university marked by two prioritized methodological inversions that become decipherable and feasible through the “focus” of Jesus forsaken. It then recalls the eventual lines of research and suggestions that came to light for the future.
